Top Ten Things You Can Do to Plan for Transition

1. Get a Diagnosis of Disability and a Medicaid Waiver
   First, get a recent exam from a psychologist (private or through the schools) that shows an IQ score and developmental disability diagnosis. Then apply for a Waiver, which is a bundle of long term care supports designed to make the person with a disability as independent and well-supported as possible while they reside in their community. Waiting lists for Disability Waivers are long and these are the waivers with the most supports. Get on the waiting list early! If you also have medical needs, try to use the EDCD Waiver while you’re waiting for a more comprehensive Disability Waiver. You can also call the state’s Waiver assistance hotline at 1-844-603-9248 or visit the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Services’ website at http://www.mylifemycommunityvirginia.org/ or visit https://thearcofnova.org/programs-services/library/#waivers

2. Look into Recreation and Social Activities
   We’re all happier when we have a place to exercise or have some fun. Explore your county’s therapeutic recreation department as well as groups like Challenger Baseball and Special Olympics for options. Look into People First/Toastmasters and People First for Young Adults, self-advocacy groups run by The Arc of Northern Virginia where everyone learns to share their story and grow their voice.

3. Transportation
   Having great places to go doesn’t mean much unless you can get there. The Arc of Northern VA developed TravelMate, an app to provide supports to learn to ride the bus, train, metro, or cab. Look into Metro’s reduced fare or Metro Access program, then apply for Taxi Access. If you receive Medicaid, a free program called Logisticare can provide transportation to and from medical appointments.

4. Look Into Public Benefits
   If someone has Medicaid under age 21, they are eligible for a program called EPSDT (Early Periodic Screening, Diagnosis, and Treatment). This program can provide assistance for medical and non-medical needs. Once a person with a disability is 18 year old, they should be eligible for SSI (Supplemental Security Income) through Social Security if their disability is preventing them from earning a living wage. They may also be eligible for SSDI, a disability based benefit. Once approved, the person should also apply for Medicaid.

   *Note- someone at or near the poverty level can apply for SSI and Medicaid at any age.

5. Establish a Special Needs Trust
   Consider setting up a Special Needs Trust which is a legal way to protect assets for a person with a disability without disqualifying them from public benefits.

6. Explore Supported Decision Making and Legal Authority
   If someone will need assistance in making safe and healthy decisions or managing resources, consider looking into legal authority options. A good time to start looking into these services is around age 17 years.

7. Become Informed About Transition and Employment Resources
   Attend all the transition resource fairs, information sessions and educational workshops you can. Read The Arc of Northern Virginia’s Transition POINTS Guides: “Securing a Future for Your Child with a Disability” and “Entering the World of Work” online. The Arc of Northern Virginia also offers workshops throughout the year.

8. Plan for Transition
   Aging out of the school system is a tough time as it seems like all mandated services end overnight. Prepare by applying for a waiver (see #1 above), working with your school’s Employment Transition Representative (ETR), local Department of Aging and Rehabilitative Services (DARS), and/or hire a private job coach. Read The Arc of Northern Virginia’s Transition POINTS Guide: “Entering the World of Work.” It can be downloaded from our website. Tour employment service organizations and have your student complete situational assessments.

9. Find Family Supports
   Talk to other people with disabilities, other families, other siblings. You are not alone and some of the most helpful resources come directly from those who have come before you. Reach out to a local group to find someone who understands just what you’re going through. These groups include Jewish Social Services Agency (JSSA), Parents of Autistic Children (POAC), Autism Society of Northern Virginia (ASNV), Down Syndrome Association of Northern Virginia (DSANV), and the Sibling Leadership Network at The Arc of the United States.

10. Be an advocate
    There are no voices more powerful in changing the world than the voices of a person with a disability and their family. By sharing your story and advocating for local, state, and federal resources you make the world a better place for everyone. Become a member of The Arc of Northern Virginia and join us in advocating for change. Your membership dollars fund free resources for families, trips to Richmond to advocate with legislators, and help support our ongoing programs.
